The Southern Hemisphere

We who live on the forehead of the earth are comfortable with the misconception that we are “up”, and everything else is “down”.

I came across this old globe hanging in storage in the basement. The base is missing and it had swung around so the South Pole was pointed up.

In a universe as big as this, who is to say what direction is “up”. I decided to mount it permanently in this configuration.

I am going to give the globe to my Australian daughter-in-law on the next occasion. The down-under has been ...

... down too long.
