A few Nordic memories...

When you are staying at the oldest hotel in Europe and the artwork in your room seems to be hanging crooked, you need to consider whether it is the picture, or the hotel that is off kilter.

Hotel Dagmar, Ribe, Denmark, established 1581.

You have choices to make when you go to a men's toilet in Denmark. One-handed, or freestyle.

In Denmark, bicycles have the right of way.
And why wouldn't you.

Danish mobile home park.

The only thing better than Smørrebrød, is s'møre.

Thatched roofs, half-timbered houses, light houses, windmills, and boundless natural beauty.

Other Curiosities: The world's shortest lighthouse, a bull door knocker with a snail latch, a community oil-change ramp, and a not-so-little mermaid.

Four accidental photos of my foot. I have no idea how this happens, or how little you care.

See you on the next trip.....
